

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A material can be molded into part made of a biocompatible binder containing one or several compounds for adding calcium and phosphorus. It has been subjected to a surface pickling operation intended to ensure surface application and hence surface access of the elements added to the binder, in particular calcium and phosphorus. This material may advantageously be used for the realization of endo-bone implants or bone prostheses.